Commerce officials attend Cherokee Business Summit

On July 28, the Sequoyah Fund, the Cherokee Business Development Center, and the N.C. Indian Economic Development Initiative co-sponsored the "Native Pathways Collaborative 2011 - Cherokee Business Summit and Expo." N.C. Department of Commerce Deputy Secretary Dale Carroll participated in the ribbon-cutting with Principal Chief Michell Hicks of the Eastern Band of the Cherokee. During his comments, Carroll presented Governor Bev Perdue's small business priorities to the attendees including an update about the N.C. Capital Access Program. Assistant Secretary for Tourism, Marketing and Global Branding Lynn Minges, Tourism Development Manager Andre Nabors and Senior Policy Advisor Libby Smith participated in Business Summit sessions with leaders from around the state. In addition, Minges visited attractions and met with tourism officials on the reservation and in the surrounding counties along with Public Relations Manager Margo Metzger.

Aero conference to connect N.C. companies with contractors

Senator Richard Burr, the N.C. Aerospace Alliance and the N.C. Military Business Center are pleased to announce the 2011 N.C. Aerospace Suppliers Conference to be held at the Koury Convention Center in Greensboro on Aug. 24 from 8:30 a.m. – 6:30 p.m.

"The Supplier Conference is an outstanding opportunity for companies that can supply the aerospace industry to network with and learn about current and future requirements of prime and first tier subcontractors," said Scott Dorney, NCMBC executive director. "Businesses that can supply the aerospace industry should definitely attend."

The conference's goal is to promote and grow North Carolina's aerospace industry by bringing together North Carolina users, purchasers, manufacturers, and suppliers through education, networking and growth opportunities. The conference will also provide a forum for sharing "best practices" in order to promote job growth, financial stability and a stronger industry in our state. Learn more.

New study: N.C. Ranks No. 2 in nation for cost-efficiency in manufacturing

According to an American Institute for Economic Research (AIER) study, North Carolina has the second lowest manufacturing costs in the nation, coming in fourth for most cost-efficient manufacturing state after the three states that tied for first. AIER research fellow Lei Chen, PhD, completed the study using 2007 economic census data as well as Data Envelopment Analysis.

North Carolina was the only Southern state in the top ten as well as in the list of states that came in with costs lower than the national average. In an earlier study by Chen, North Carolina was second in a state-by-state comparison of the cost of producing a dollar's worth of goods. Read more.

Medical software developer announces expansion in Durham

Governor Bev Perdue on July 27 announced that Health IT Services Group, the developer of intuitive software tools to assist nephrologists in the practice of medicine, will open an office at the American Tobacco Campus. HITSG plans to create 45 new jobs and occupy 12,000 square feet on the campus.

"Over the past 20 years, North Carolina has transitioned to a diversified global economy driven by information-based enterprises, such as biotech and financial services," said Perdue. "Our investments in education and workforce development have truly paved the way for the kind of innovative thinking happening at companies like HITSG."

Acumen nEHR, which boasts 5,000 daily users in 32 states and provides real-time access for almost 2,000,000 patient records, allows nephrologists and their staff to access patient data via the Internet while remaining HIPAA compliant for privacy. The company is a unit of Fresenius Medical Care, the largest provider of renal services in the world. Read more.
